24,000 business entities to receive notice of delinquent filings

LINCOLN – More than 24,000 business entities in Nebraska are on notice – annual and biennial reports are now past due. Secretary of State John Gale says all 2017 reports should have been filed with his office by April 1. Now, a reminder is being mailed to those limited liability companies (LLCs), limited liability partnerships (LLPs) and nonprofits, which missed the deadline.

“Each of those entity types can file and make payments online, which can help expedite the process,” explained Gale. “They have until June 1 to do this, otherwise, domestic entities could be administratively dissolved or in the case of foreign entities, have their authority revoked.”

Links to the appropriate forms are easily accessible on the main page of the Secretary of State’s website: www.sos.ne.gov. The system guides users through the filing process and produces an electronic receipt after payment is completed.

Filings have not been received by 20,326 LLCs, 60 LLPs and 3,900 nonprofit corporations doing business in Nebraska.

Business entities that fail to file by June 1, but wish to remain in good standing, will be required to reinstate or refile, depending on the entity type. They will be assessed a reinstatement fee in addition to any payments that are past due.
